

THROAT CENTER - UNDEFINED

You have an undefined Throat Center, meaning you have a versatile, spontaneous voice and your capacity to speak depends on whom you are with.

You communicate best when conversation is initiated by someone else. This allows you to speak spontaneously, not getting caught up trying to repeat something you've rehearsed.

This fear of not knowing what to say that causes you to rehearse conversations is unhealthy.

What you say depends on whom you are talking to, and what you need to say in the moment will reveal itself spontaneously. If nothing comes out, then there is simply nothing to say, but there is no need to get caught up in planning your conversations.

To have an open Throat is to carry the potential of speaking and doing things in a multitude of ways, not fixed in any one way. It's healthy to speak in the moment, because you may say something truly remarkable, something you hadn't even thought of.

Since you don't have a fixed way of speaking, you sometimes feel the need to be verbally dominant, speaking without invitation or through response, inappropriately or at the wrong time. This will drive others away, and not attract the attention you seek. It's healthy to be comfortable with silence; in essence, it is your natural state.

There is no need to say something just because you feel awkward. Learn to appreciate silence and wait for the conversation to be brought to you.

Seeking attention is one of the traps of having an open Throat Center; this can lead to much pain. Please understand that you will naturally receive attention from people who are meant to be in your life, but only if you let them come to you. By letting go of the need to attract attention to yourself, you will finally begin to see the opposite; who and what needs or deserves attention.

If you initiate anything in life, whether it be a conversation or a relationship, there is always a chance of this leading to suffering, exhaustion, and health problems. Having an open Throat is all about letting things come to you.

Wait for others to initiate and, instead of disappointment, you will experience the joy of living a truly effortless life.

COMPLETELY OPEN THROAT CENTER

Not Knowing What to Say.

With an activation, the Open Throat is all about attracting attention, which has a deeply detrimental effect on the thyroid system. So many human beings with open Throat Centers suffer from throat problems, because they put so much pressure on their system to say what they feel they need to say to get the attention they think they need to get.

This ends up being a physical problem for them more than anything else, aside from the fact that, most of the time, when they're trying to attract that attention they only get its negative. That is, they don't get the kind of attention they assumed they were going to get in the first place.

With a completely open Throat Center, the keynote here is not knowing what to say—having really no idea what to say, or what action to take. Now, this doesn't mean that you cannot express yourself. But it does mean that if you don't have a decision-making process, and the Not-self dictates how and when to attract attention then you end up saying the wrong thing at the wrong time, or repeating what you've heard others say, and nobody pays any real attention to it.

Being able to express ourselves and to express what is in our nature is deeply important.

Over time, as you learn to trust your inner Authority to guide you in this process, and you are comfortable with the fact that there simply is no certainty or predictability to when you can speak or express yourself, you can find the confidence to remain with your process and the potential for wisdom of this open center reveals itself. In expressing your own nature, you will also recognize when someone else is speaking and acting from a place of authenticity.

NOT-SELF TALK

- Where should I go so I can get the attention I want?
- Is anyone noticing me?
- If I say this then I will be noticed.
- If I initiate this conversation, I will get the attention I deserve.
- I'd better say something, because this silence is making me uncomfortable.
- What should I manifest? I'd better manifest something.
